Raghabpur Campus.

Sudakshina Basu, Bengali Department,

Venue-

Raghabpur Campus, St. Xavier's College

(Autonomous),

Kolkata

Audience-

All Students. Though it was mainly focused on the students of

Postgraduate who has opted for the Post Independent Bengali

Literature as their elective paper and Bengali Honours semester 4 students who reads the poem of Kobita Singho

Outcome-

1. It opened a scope of conversation between literature and society. This seminar pointed out the oppression and opportunities of patriarchal society in the writing of the women after post-independence of India.
2. The speaker gave a vivid introduction of the poets and writers in this period, starting from Kabita Singha. The student understood the broader aspect of the literary text that they are learning in their syllabus.

3. The participation of the students in questioner session, was spontaneous. They asked many questions to the speaker and sheared their experience from their day-to-day life relating the said literature. They talked about social taboos that they are facing. They had also added some point of oppression on creative women from their experience of rural life which made the seminar fruitful.
4. The rural campus of the college came to an exposure as the speaker is in a very important post in government and an eminent poet. Her overwhelming experience, which she shared with her peer group left a good impact of our campus.

SPEAKER

TITLE: In 'Search' of More Lights

Abstract: Astronomy is different from other sciences in the sense that astronomers can't actually handle, touch, or alter in any way the stuff they study. Light is the main means by which they study most of the astronomical phenomena. They use sophisticated instruments (telescopes and cameras) and technology to collect and measure electromagnetic and other radiation from beyond the Earth. In recent years, several projects in the area of Astronomy have been planned. The talk will describe such developments and opportunities for the young researchers.
