

Contextualising Modernities

1. Remembering: Recognize and recall key concepts and theories related to Eurocentrism, globalism, postcolonialism, and the disavowal of history in anthropology.
2. Understanding: Explain the significance of endogenous knowledge and the diversity of sociological traditions in challenging Eurocentric perspectives.
3. Applying: Utilize border thinking and Walter Mignolo's framework to analyze how anthropology constructs and represents its objects.
4. Analyzing: Critically evaluate the implications of multiple modernities and new subjectivities in the context of decolonizing knowledge production.
5. Evaluating: Assess the strengths and weaknesses of postcolonial approaches to history and modernity in shaping alternative narratives to Eurocentrism.
6. Creating: Develop research projects or interventions that integrate endogenous knowledge and diverse sociological traditions to contextualize modernities beyond Eurocentrism.
