

HISTORY OF GENDER

1. Define women's history and explain its evolution over time, including key milestones and developments in the field.
2. Summarize the challenges faced by women's history, such as biases in historical narratives, lack of primary sources on women's experiences, and resistance to including women's perspectives in mainstream history.
3. Apply feminist research methodologies and analyze their impact on shaping historical narratives from a gendered perspective.
4. Evaluate recent trends in feminist and gender historiography, including intersectionality, queer theory, and postcolonial perspectives.
5. Examine the contributions of 'Black' and Third World Feminisms to the field of women's history, including their unique perspectives and challenges in challenging dominant narratives.
6. Analyze the intersection of women's history with law, exploring key legal developments affecting women's rights and status throughout history.
7. Critically assess the role of sexuality and rights movements in shaping gender history, including the impact of LGBTQ+ activism on challenging traditional gender norms.
8. Discuss the relationship between gender and media studies, exploring how representations of women in media have evolved over time and the implications for gender equality and identity.

By the end of this course, students will be able to demonstrate a comprehensive understanding of the history of gender, feminism, and women's experiences, as well as the ability to critically analyze and reflect on the challenges and opportunities in the field of gender history.
