

Literature and the Arts; Research Methodology

Course Outcome:

1. Knowledge:

- Identify and describe different genres of literature such as novel, drama, and short story.
- Analyze the techniques used in literature and screen adaptations (film & TV) to convey a story effectively.
- Recognize and appreciate the connection between literature and painting.

2. Comprehension:

- Explain the impact of literature on other art forms such as painting and film.
- Interpret the relationship between literature and its adaptations on screen.
- Understand the process of conducting research in the field of literature and the arts.

3. Application:

- Apply research methodology principles to plan and execute research activities related to literature, including screen adaptations and painting.
- Utilize systematic planning to conduct research on different stages of literature analysis and adaptation.

4. Analysis:

- Analyze the effectiveness of different research methodologies in studying literature and the arts.
- Evaluate the success of screen adaptations in capturing the essence of literary works.
- Critically assess the relationship between literature and painting through research.

5. Evaluation:

- Critique the methodologies used in literature research and screen adaptations.
- Assess the impact of painting on the interpretation of literature.
- Judge the success of research activities in exploring the connection between literature and the arts.

6. Synthesis:

- Develop research proposals related to literature and screen adaptations, incorporating systematic planning and execution.
- Synthesize information from literature, film, TV, and paintings to create a comprehensive understanding of artistic expressions.
- Create connections between different art forms and literature through research analysis and synthesis.

Select Language ▼

Powered by  Google Translate

