

PROJECT AND DISSERTATION

Course Outcome for Project and Dissertation:

1. Remembering: Recall and describe the principles of in-house experimental capacity and the process of reviewing journal papers.
2. Understanding: Explain the importance of in-house experimental capacity and the significance of reviewing journal papers in the context of project and dissertation work.
3. Applying: Demonstrate the ability to utilize in-house experimental capacity for conducting hands-on experiments and apply critical analysis skills to review and assess relevant journal papers.
4. Analyzing: Analyze and evaluate the effectiveness of in-house experimental capacity for conducting experiments and the quality of information obtained through reviewing journal papers.
5. Evaluating: Evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of in-house experimental capacity and the reliability of information obtained from journal papers in the context of project and dissertation research.
6. Creating: Design and implement a comprehensive project or dissertation by integrating in-house experimental capacity and findings from reviewed journal papers to contribute new knowledge to the field.

Select Language

Powered by  Google Translate

